

Catholic Charities' Search and Reunion Policy

Our Mission: Catholic Charities recognizes that adoption is a lifelong process. Our post-adoption program offers a continuum of services that respects the relationships among the adoptee, the birth parents, and the adoptive parents. In all circumstances, confidentiality and our clients' best interests are our primary concern.

Catholic Charities Serves:

- Adopted persons—all individuals who were adopted through Catholic Charities in the Boston Archdiocese of Massachusetts and all other agencies for which Catholic Charities now maintains the records.
- Birth parents and siblings of persons adopted, as stated above.
- Adoptive parents of adoptees that are still minors, as stated above.

How Massachusetts Law Guides Catholic Charities' Services:

Catholic Charities' policies and procedures comply with Massachusetts General Law c.210 section 5D governing the release of adoption information.

The law specifically addresses the exchange and disclosure of adoption information, both identifying and non-identifying, that an agency holds in its records. It states that an adoptee cannot request, without parental consent, non-identifying information before they are 18, and identifying information before they are 21. It states that identifying information cannot be released without a signed consent from a birth parent or an adoptee. It also states that a birth parent's release needs to be at least 30 days old before identifying information is released. However, it does not address or preclude the agency from utilizing that information to locate or contact any member of the adoption triad and inquire as to their wishes regarding contact. If permission is granted, it must be in writing. If permission is not granted, either because the person cannot be found or the party has declined to grant permission, release of identifying information is prohibited by the above law.

Siblings and other family members are not addressed in the statute and therefore have no legal standing to information separate from the birth parents. Confidentiality, with all its rights and responsibilities, belongs to the birth parent(s) and the adoptee, and only they or a court of competent jurisdiction may waive their rights.

In accordance with this, siblings who were not themselves adopted and other family members who wish to receive information or initiate a search cannot do so unless the birth parent is deceased. In which case, the birth parent's death certificate and documentation from the inquiring party, demonstrating the relationship to the birth parent, must be furnished.

In all cases, the decision to proceed with a search to locate someone is the discretion of the agency. It is also Catholic Charities' policy to attempt to notify all parties who have a signed release on record to determine if they still want to release identifying information, unless the release clearly indicates that prior notification is not required.
